Congress Hears about R&D Funding from Hundreds of Constituents

ATLANTA - February 1, 2008 - Vumii, a developer of highly engineered yet easy to use long-range surveillance camera systems, announced it has been selected to address entrepreneurs and investors at the Southeast Venture Conference (SEVC) 2008, taking place February 27-28 at the Ritz-Carlton in Tysons Corner, Va. The event is considered the region's premier opportunity for technology companies to showcase their businesses to national and regional venture capitalists and private equity investors.

Vumii CEO, president and co-founder Randall Foster will discuss his company's growth, expanded product line and how its solutions are solving a critical need in the global commercial and governmental outdoor perimeter and border security market. The conference offers a chance to facilitate networking opportunities and collaboration among the southeast and Mid-Atlantic's technology and investment community.

"Vumii is honored to be among the handful of companies selected to appear before this elite gathering of entrepreneurs and investors," said Foster. "We're also excited to discuss how our technology allows our customers to prevent and respond to terrorism, theft, vandalism, asset damage, and other physical security threats by dramatically improving the ability of security personnel to evaluate and rapidly respond to significant risks to their environments."

The second annual SEVC will include 40 dynamic high-growth presenting companies and representatives from firms with over $50 billion in investment capital.

About Vumii

Vumii develops highly engineered yet easy to use long-range surveillance camera systems that deliver unsurpassed imaging and magnification capabilities for day and night perimeter surveillance applications. Unlike thermal imaging and other passive illumination solutions, Vumii's Discoverii technology leverages electro-optics and image processing to give security professionals the ability to view natural contrasts, to see words and numbers on objects, to experience high resolution and high continuous zoom magnification in zero light, and even to see through windows and windshields at very long ranges for the ultimate investigative capabilities. Security professionals at Vumii-protected sites can better see, interpret and respond to criminal and terrorist threats. Our solutions are ideal for critical physical security concerns, particularly for outdoor perimeter protection in the transportation, industrial and government sectors. Vumii solutions are affordable and easily integrate with existing security systems. Founded in 2004, Vumii is a privately-held company headquartered in Atlanta, Ga.
